

What are your thoughts ...about Coaching?

Perhaps you think critically about Coaching from a bad past experience and the results led to more conflicts, disagreements or frustrations. Then again, maybe it was not your plan that you were working on...it was more the coaches' plan for you. This could be especially true if you did not measure up to the coach's expectation or pace. For some, maybe, you are not comfortable with sharing your goals and challenges with a stranger and are determined to do life your way or as some would say "the hard-way."

Strategic Talent Management believes there is a coaching process that works...a process of building self-awareness, self-development, and self-determination, which creates self-direction and that new opportunity. A process where the individual determines what it is that they need to improve upon to reach a specific goal, learn a much-needed skill, or change their perspective about their potential to building a new career. Our Personal Mastery coaching process will influence all their other dreams and goals.

We understand that a coach can only be effective when you have the aspiration to overcome an obstacle limiting your potential. We cannot take you to a place where you do not want to go. We can share from our own personal experiences in hiring our own coaches over the last 15 years, share a proven accountability process, and assist you to develop skills that lead to your personal mastery and success.

If there is something holding, you back...call us to explore what Personal Mastery coaching may mean to you and your business.

We have coached CEO's and executive team members, managers and supervisors, account and sales representatives, customer service and administrative staffs, project teams and the unemployed and under-employed. Call to learn more about our alternative approach to outplacement; contact William Maloney, Chief Talent Officer, (603) 766-4935, or CoachBill@StrategicTalentManagement.com

STM, One New Hampshire Avenue, Suite 125, Portsmouth, NH 03801

Dealing with Conflicts

Meeting new Challenges

Delivering great Service

Know someone who needs Coaching?

Check Us Out!